ABSTRACT

5   An apparatus and method are provided to prevent unauthorized access to a software application, a computer network, or an individual computer. The apparatus stores the biometric signal of an authorized user, and compares it with the biometric signal from the individual attempting to access the software or network and then either allows access to that software or 10   network or denies access.

580655.1